

WILLIAM J. GALBRAITH

WILLIAM J. GALBRAITH, long a highly respected and influential member of the Grand Lodge, was born at Freeport, Penn., Feb. 18, 1837, and came to Washington in 1890. He was educated at Dartmouth College and became a lawyer by profession. After four years' service in the Civil War, as a First Lieutenant, he was made a Mason in 1865 in Armstrong Lodge, No. 239, Pennsylvania. He was for many years a member and Master of our Colville Lodge, No. 50, and largely instrumental in reviving that Lodge. He after-wards became a charter member of Bremerton Lodge, No. 117, of which he is now Chaplain. Judge Galbraith-who acquired his title by nine years' service as Associate Justice of the Supreme Court of Montana-had been exalted to the degree of the Holy Royal Arch in Pennsylvania, and was a High Priest in Montana. He is also a Knight Templar and a member of Reliance Chapter, O.E.S.
